Governor Asks Turnpike Commission For Additional Interchange On Route 15

Governor James H. Duff told a reporter for The Gettysburg Times Saturday afternoon that he had asked the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission to construct an additional interchange on the eastern extension of the Turnpike on U. S. 15 (Gettysburg-Harrisburg road) to "funnel traffic off the Turnpike south through Gettysburg and eventually to Washington."

The Governor made the statement in the lobby of the Hotel Gettysburg where he had left the Boy Scout luncheon, temporarily, to be interviewed by a Times reporter.

"Gettysburg and Valley Forge are two of the greatest historic shrines in the state and nation and we should go out of our way to do everything possible to give direct access to these two shrines to the hundreds of thousands of visitors who visit Pennsylvania each year."

New Traffic Here

"The tremendous increase in traffic on the Turnpike in the next few years will funnel new traffic into Gettysburg. This unquestioned increase in traffic on U. S. 15 will be so great in the next few years that it will necessitate a new and larger artery of transportation on this route through Gettysburg."

"Does this mean that traffic will by-pass Gettysburg?" he was asked.

"Indeed not," the Governor replied. "On the contrary it will come directly through Gettysburg. The thousands of people who come to Pennsylvania each year want to come to Gettysburg. They do not want to miss it. And we should make our modern highways lead to this shrine and other shrines in the state. We do not intend to by-pass Gettysburg."

No Gettysburg By-Pass
When asked if the state planned to by-pass Gettysburg with a modern Lincoln highway from McKnightstown east, the Governor replied:

"No there are no plans or intentions of doing that. That can best be answered by my request of the Turnpike Commission to build an additional interchange on the Turnpike at its juncture with Route 15."

"The reason for that is to make Gettysburg more accessible to our visitors. Therefore we could not very handily by-pass Gettysburg with the Lincoln highway modernization."

Commenting further, Gov. Duff said:

Approves LINCOLN SQUARE
"I am glad to learn that you are going to call your square, LINCOLN SQUARE. Lincoln and Gettysburg are inseparable because of the greatest speech that was ever delivered in the history of the world."

"Of all the places in the world this is the one place where we should venerate, dedicate and honor the memory of Lincoln. It should have been done years ago."

DUFF FAVORS LINCOLN SQUARE

Governor James H. Duff said the renaming of Center square as LINCOLN SQUARE was "a most appropriate thing to do," Saturday afternoon.

Shown a copy of The Gettysburg Times editorial declaring that from now on the square was designated as "LINCOLN SQUARE," the governor said:

"This is the most appropriate thing to do. Gettysburg and Lincoln are synonymous not only in America but throughout the world. Of all places, it is particularly appropriate that your square, which is so closely associated with one of Lincoln's greatest days and his greatest speech, should be so designated."

MUSSELMAN FOUNDATION GIVES SCHOOL

The Musselman high school, a new modern structure, located midway between Inwood and Bunker Hill, in Berkeley county, West Virginia, was formally turned over to the school authorities Friday by the C. H. Musselman Foundation, Biglerville.

Attending the ceremony were: Mrs. C. H. Musselman and several hundred citizens of Berkeley county, students and faculty of the school, members of the school board and representatives of the C. H. Musselman company, including John A. Hauser, president; Walter Moyer, superintendent of the Inwood plant of the C. H. Musselman company and others.

The gift of the new building, modern and complete and estimated to have cost several hundred thousand dollars, was accepted by Stewart Cline, president of the board of education; for the school administration by James Creasey, superintendent of schools. Paul Le Dane spoke for the community and Miss Leatha Dellinger for the students.

CHICKEN THIEF JAILED; OTHERS ARE SENTENCED

Cletus Orndorff, Midway, who stole four chickens from a widow on the morning of her late husband's funeral, was sentenced to from 11 to 23 months in the Adams county jail by the county court this morning.

After hearing testimony by Maynard Masemer, chief of police at McSherrystown, and Mrs. William Groff, McSherrystown, owner of the four roosters stolen, the court directed that Ervin J. Treiber, who confessed to stealing the chickens with Orndorff, be arrested and brought before the county court for sentencing.

Chief Masemer told the court that Orndorff's connection with the rooster robbery came to light when Treiber was arrested in Hanover on a charge of stealing a March of Dimes collection box, and added that Treiber is now in York county jail. In addition to his jail sentence, Orndorff was also sentenced to pay a $50 fine and the costs.

Must Serve Full Term

Herbert Franklin Lloyd, Gardner R. 2, will be returned to serve out the remainder of a previous term on a charge of violating his parole and when he completes that period he will be sentenced in Adams county on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor, he was told by the court this morning. Lloyd served from 1944 to 1947 on a sentence ranging from "indeterminate to 20 years." He was placed on parole and when he committed the contributing act in Adams county he violated his parole. For that reason he will be returned to serve the remainder of that original sentence, the judge ruled.

Richard Samuel Kuhn, Biglerville R. 1, who was also on parole and who was connected with Lloyd in the contributing to the delinquency of a minor charge was given a different sentence by the court. Since it appeared Kuhn had been led by Lloyd into the act, the county court will recommend that to the parole board that he not be sent back to jail on the parole violation. However he was given a one year sentence in the Adams county jail starting from his commitment January 15. He was told that a parole, on very stringent terms, may be considered in four months.

3,000 SCOUTS ON PILGRIMAGE HERE SATURDAY

A third annual pilgrimage to Gettysburg on Lincoln's birthday next year was being discussed today by officials of the Keystone Boy Scout area following the success of Saturday's pilgrimage which attracted twice as many scouts as were here in 1949.

More than 3,000 scouts, from the 39 councils in the state, marched through the streets of Gettysburg behind two bands Saturday morning, took part in ceremonies at the National cemetery, prepared their noon meal at five sites on the Gettysburg battlefield and then visited a number of historic spots on the battlefield before returning to their homes.

Pennsylvania's Governor James H. Duff spoke twice during the day. At the cemetery he told the scouts, "We must quit talking of our American privileges and get down to talking of our American obligations. This is the true meaning of scouting, that it teaches young men the responsibilities of citizenship."

Speaks At Luncheon

At a luncheon held in the Hotel Gettysburg he told a group of eagle scouts and scout officials that "we must preserve our national and our human resources." He praised scouting for getting children out of the cities and into the "woodlands and fields" noting that "from the good earth they will draw a love of our nation."

Noting that "our forefathers did not realize the magnitude of the devastation they created in their march westward," the governor urged the planting of trees as "a (Please Turn to Page 2)

DRIVER CHARGED AFTER ACCIDENT

Two youths were injured Saturday evening at 6:40 o'clock when two cars collided just west of Hanover on the Gettysburg-Hanover road.

Albert Strausbaugh, 11, suffered lacerations of the face and scalp and his brother, Paul Strausbaugh, 14, received laceration of the face, head injuries and contusions of the leg. Both were treated by Dr. Anthony Tananis, of McSherrystown, and then Albert was admitted to the Hanover hospital for further examination for possible concussion.

The two were passengers in a car driven by their brother, William Strausbaugh, 18. All are of Hanover R. 4.

State police of the local substation, who investigated, said a car driven by Roy Ginter, 50, Gettysburg R. 5, was being operated on the wrong side of the road and smashed into the Strausbaugh car. Damage totalled $100. A charge of drunken driving was laid before Justice of the Peace L. G. Kuhn against Ginter by state police.

At a hearing this morning, Ginter was held for April court under $500 bond.

COUNTY SENTENCED

Appearing for sentencing on a charge of drunken driving Friday afternoon in Franklin county court, Garnet W. George, of Fairfield R. 1, was directed to serve 30 days in the Franklin county jail and to pay the costs of prosecution. He previously had served two days in jail before being released under bond. He entered a guilty plea to the charge, filed by State police, earlier last week.

MISS SMILEY

LARGE CROWD AT EXERCISES IN CEMETERY

Approximately 2,500 persons gathered at the National cemetery Sunday afternoon for the service in celebration of Lincoln's birthday, held under sponsorship of the Gettysburg camp of the Sons of Union Veterans.

The program included numbers by the Blue and Gray band of Gettysburg; recitation of Lincoln's Gettysburg address and placing of a wreath by Colleen Townsend, 21-year-old movie actress, and a eulogy of Lincoln by Dr. J. Walter Coleman, superintendent of the Gettysburg National park.

Describing a visit by Lincoln to Richmond during which he called at the home of General Pickett, only to find him out, Lincoln told those who asked who had called, "Just tell him an old friend from Illinois." Doctor Coleman said, "that is the way I like to think of Lincoln, and that is the way I believe Lincoln would like to be thought of, as 'an old friend from Illinois.'"

Luncheon At Hotel

A luncheon at the Hotel Gettysburg preceded the cemetery exercises. There Burgess William G. Weaver, Dr. Joseph H. Riley, commander of the local Sons of Union Veterans and John D. Lippy, Jr., president of the Lincoln Fellowship of Pennsylvania, welcomed Miss Townsend to Gettysburg.

She told the group that "nowhere have I received the welcome that I have here. Nowhere have I felt so much at home."

Following the cemetery program, Miss Townsend and her party were taken on a tour of the Battlefield by Doctor Coleman and visited the electric map at the National Museum for a lecture by Joseph Rosensteel.

Sunday evening the movie actress spoke to about 300 gathered at the Presbyterian church here for the regular meeting of the Young People of the church, Jean Mountain (Continued From Page 4)

Open Saturday evenings 7 to 9. The Gettysburg Times, Carlisle street. Open daily 8 a. m. to 5 p. m., except Saturdays 8 a. m. to 4 p. m. and 7 p. m. to 9 p. m.

Miss Margaret A. Smiley died suddenly at her home, Minter apartments, 44 Baltimore street, Sunday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock from coronary occlusion. She had been ill since January 1 and suffered an attack Sunday morning.

Miss Smiley, long active in the Methodist church, has also been a faithful and loyal employee of The Gettysburg Times for approximately 35 years. Last November she broke a bone in her right foot, but after a few days resumed her work as a linotype operator. Later she became ill from a weakened heart and a cold. Her most recent illness dates from the first of the year.

Enjoyed Saturday Visitors

On Saturday evening some Times employees visited Miss Smiley. She appeared in good health and her usual, normal, cheerful spirits. Her sister, Mrs. Milton R. Rimmel, also visited her Saturday evening. She has been a steady companion of her sister all through her illnesses. At 10:30 o'clock Saturday evening Miss Smiley said she had enjoyed her visitors and felt like eating something, which she did.

Sunday morning Mrs. Rimmel and Mrs. Harvey Bushman, a niece, prepared breakfast for Miss Smiley. Twice, while eating, Miss Smiley rested her head on the table and said she felt weak. Mrs. Rimmel said she noticed a "great change" in her sister. She declined to retire, however, and said "I'll be all right."

Mr. and Mrs. Rimmel had arranged to bring Sunday dinner to Miss Smiley from a nearby restaurant. It was while they were at the restaurant that Miss Smiley was fatally stricken.

Born In York Springs

She was born in York Springs, a daughter of the late James A. and John Anna (Little) Smiley. As a child she came with her parents to Gettysburg and resided here the remainder of her life.

She was a member of the Methodist church and Mrs. Tate's class. Miss Smiley was one of the oldest employees of the Times and News Publishing company, being employed as a proof reader and later as a linotype operator since 1915.

Surviving are two sisters, Mrs. M. S. Yohe, New Oxford, and Mrs. Milton R. Rimmel, East Middle street, and one brother, J. Murray Smiley, Philadelphia. A number of nephews and nieces also survive.

Funeral services Wednesday at 3:30 p. m. from the Bender funeral home conducted by the Rev. Edward K. Stipe. Interment in Evergreen cemetery.

Eyes Of Nation Are Focused On Gettysburg Over Week-end

TORNADOES KILL 34 IN 3 STATES OVER WEEK-END

Ripley, Tenn., Feb. 13 (AP)—A roaring tornado cut through the little farm community of Hurricane Hill early today and snuffed out at least nine lives.

Gartner funeral home here identified eight of the dead as members of the Wilson Carroll family. It said a negro farm hand also was killed.

Ambulances still were at the rain-swept scene five miles east of this west Tennessee town and some 58 miles north of Memphis.

Shreveport, La., Feb. 13 (AP)—Tornadoes twisted death-dealing winds through northwestern Louisiana, east Texas and southern Arkansas over the week-end. Thirty-four persons were reported killed and 260 injured.

Twenty-six were believed dead in Louisiana, all in a 40-mile radius of Shreveport. There were eight known dead in Texas.

Louisiana's injured was estimated at 100. So was the number of persons hurt in Texas. Hundreds of homes and other buildings were smashed.

The tornadoes—spawned Saturday when a mass of cold air collided with a mass of warm, moist air—struck at least 20 times in less than 24 hours.

The number of dead in Texas and Louisiana had been reported as high as 42 at one time last night. But Louisiana state police at Bossier City sealed this figure down with a check that caught some duplications.

The Shreveport Times gave this breakdown of Louisiana dead: At Roytown, nine; Black Air Force depot near Shreveport, six; Silgo, four; Hood's quarters, on the outskirts of Shreveport, two; Shreveport, one; Grand Cane, four.

Twisters in Texas killed three women near the little saw-mill town of Haslam; an 18-month-old boy and his father in a community southwest of Lufkin, a woman in the Hericho community near Haslam, an elderly woman at Corley, near Texarkana, and ex-slave at La Porte. Arkansas reported much less damage and no injuries from a single tornado.

There were few immediate estimates of damage. But it was put at $300,000 in the La Porte-Alvin area; $35,000 at Hughes Springs and $25,000 at Corley. Most points hit in Louisiana were still wearily taking stock today.

Sorority Initiates Thirteen Saturday

Welcomes were extended to the group by Miss Betty Phleger, president of the actives, and Mrs. R. D. Wickerham, president of the alumnae. mark of our interest in the future for those who come after us," and urged the scouts to set aside some area near Gettysburg as a place where many trees could be planted as a memorial for future generations to see. "I was much impressed at the magnificent hemlocks in the National cemetery," he said, "I understand they were not there when Lincoln spoke. These magnificent trees are an example of what can be done in less than 100 years, if we wish to conserve our natural resources and rebuild them." He said the state by next year will be producing 50,000,000 seedling trees a year for planting.

Two United Nations troop scouts, Antonio Carpio, 12, and Franklin Ruas, 16, were guests of honor at the program.

Both spoke at the exercises held in the cemetery. Carpio, son of a Philippine official in the United Nations, told of undergoing the Japanese occupation of Manila. Ruas, son of a member of the French staff of the United Nations, was born in China and told of his experiences during the Japanese occupation of China.

Carpio declared: "Since I know first hand how terrible war can be, the ideals of the United Nations have a special meaning for me." Ruas said the United Nations scout troop at Lake Success is made up of representatives from 17 nations and noted wryly that the scouts hope the day will come when the members of the United Nations will be able to get along as well as the members of the United Nations scout troop.

Three hundred tenderfoot scouts were welcomed into scouting at a special ceremony held in connection with the program at the cemetery.

Dr. J. Walter Coleman, superintendent of the Gettysburg National Military park, headed the group of park officials who conducted the scouts on their tour of the battlefield. Among the places visited in addition to the field was the site of McAllister's mill, a station on the underground railroad during pre-Civil War days.

WARRIORS FACE MECHANICSBURG HERE TUESDAY

A battle for undisputed possession of second place in the South Penn Basketball league will be staged here Tuesday evening between Mechanicsburg and Gettysburg high schools. The teams are currently tied with three wins and a defeat each, one game back of the first place Chambersburg outfit.

As an added attraction two teams of the Junior Recreation league will clash in a 10-minute game during the half-time intermission.

Mechanicsburg has created quite a stir in the second half race and won its first three contests before 48-43 decision at Hershey last Friday.

The Wildcats handed the Warriors a 37-26 at Mechanicsburg to dash all hopes of the Forney-men for a first half title and it is certain the Maroon and White outfit will be gunning for revenge.

Sonny Jacobs, guard, will be a marked man as his nine goals proved fatal to Gettysburg in the first meeting of the teams. Badoff, center, is another high-scoring lad for Coach Seibert's clan.

Coach Howard Shoemaker's reserves will be out to snap a three-game losing streak in the preliminary game which will get underway at 6:45.

KINER HONORED AT PITTSBURGH

Pittsburgh, Feb. 13 (AP) — Ralph Kiner wants with all his heart to break Babe Ruth's home run record this year but he's not talking much about it. He's afraid he'll jinx himself.

This is the story intimates get from the 27-year-old Pittsburgh Pirate slugger.

Ralph slammed out 54 home runs last year—just six short of the Babe's record. His only comment for publication is:

"I hope to break the record and I'd like to. I've certainly been trying but it's a little tough. I hope to have a good year. If I tried to set a goal, it would be the worst thing I could do. I just go on from day to day. If I said I would break the record, I'd just be jinxing myself."

Ralph was honored last night as Pittsburgh's most outstanding athlete of 1949. He was guest at the annual dinner of the Dapper Dan club, a sports-minded civic organization. He won the same honor in 1947.

Southern Penn League Records

It is not unusual for the Chambersburg Trojans to find themselves at the top of the heap in the Southern Pennsylvania Conference but Coach Lowell W. Schlichter knows that every other team will be out to knock off the defending titlists, if possible, in the three remaining games.

The Trojans, six-time loop champs and first-half winners, are making a shambles of the team offensive and defensive race. Only one other team has scored more than opponents and that by a total of 18 points.

Kenny Deardorff, Gettysburg, is still in the van in the individual race but Dick Wendler, of Hanover, has crept to within ten points and can easily overtake the Maroon forward in the remaining three games.

In the six years the Trojans have dominated the loop, only in 1944 did they furnish the league's leading scorer—George "Orp" Leisher, who was killed in action in Europe during the war.

G-BURG MATMEN TOP BLUE JAYS IN TWIN BILL

The Gettysburg college wrestlers rebounded from their defeat by F. and M. last Wednesday to win over the Johns Hopkins university matmen here Saturday evening 21-10 for their seventh triumph in nine engagements.

Coach Clyde Cole's freshmen also took the preliminary affair 19-13.

The victory for the varsity was particularly sweet, avenging a 26-8 defeat at Baltimore last year.

Falls were gained for the Bullets by Russ Riegel, 155, who was halted last week after 57 straight triumphs, and Lonnie Soult, 165. Decisions were taken by Jimmy Woods, 128; Dick Sassen, 136, and Bud Diehl, 175, who is unbeaten this year. Bob Herschberger and Lapinski, heavyweights, battled to a 4-4 draw.

The freshmen took their second decision in three starts in the opening meet.

Rabenstein, 128, and Whittaker, 155, gained the falls for Gettysburg. Next Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock the Bullets varsity meets Muhlenberg here. On Friday evening the freshmen meet Stevens Trade at Lancaster.

The summaries:
121—Brunson, Johns Hopkins, won 4-2 decision over Loose.

128—Woods, Gettysburg, won 4-0 decision over Cromwell.

136—Sassen, Gettysburg, defeated Potter 4-2.

145—Tighe, Johns Hopkins, pinned Hoenninger in 7:37.

155—Riegel, Gettysburg, pinned Armiger in 5:55.

165—Soult, Gettysburg, threw Zulica in 5:01.

175—Diehl, Gettysburg, won 8-0 decision over Goodrich.

Heavyweight—Herschberger, Gettysburg, and Lapinski wrestled to a 4-4 draw.

Freshman Meet

121—Woods, Gettysburg, won 6-0 decision from Ashley.

128—Rabenstein, Gettysburg, tossed Humphrey in 3:48.

136—Beller, Johns Hopkins, gained a 7-4 decision over Jennison.

145—Gloe, Johns Hopkins, pinned Miller in 3:41.

155—Whittaker, Gettysburg, tossed Spencer in 4:32.

165—Spangler, Gettysburg, defeated Szczypinski, 5-1.

175—Herschberger, Gettysburg, won from Kayne, 10-0.

Heavyweight—Barranger, Johns Hopkins, pinned Trout in 2:37.

Mr. Clay's Speech: On Tuesday the great statesman of the west commenced his speech upon the Compromise resolutions offered by him, and concluded the same on Wednesday, having occupied three hours of the latter day. The chamber was crowded to excess on both days. The correspondent of the "Sun" says that "the speech came fully up to his best efforts of former times. . . . The close of the speech was sublime. He lived in the Union and would die in the Union. Here, he exclaimed, stamping his foot, he would defy all the powers of the earth to drive him from the Union. But if a separation must come, he trusted God would take him hence that he might not witness the melancholy spectacle." In the course of his speech he paid a high compliment to Gen. Taylor for a brilliant military achievement, and also paid a glowing tribute to the merits of Gen. Scott. . . .

THE SILENCE OF COLOR

One of the most amazing things in nature is its display of color — in its trees, stones, flowers, birds, animals, fruits, and indeed about everything that our eyes meet. There is color everywhere. And all silent. Yet that silence has a language.

Color presents the greatest sales and attention appeal of anything in this world. It is ever at work, in clothing, book jackets, illustrations in books and magazines, rugs, furniture, and in fact about everywhere. This would be a drab world without any color to it.

What magic in the rising and setting of the sun, in the floating of cloud formations, and in the quick appearance of the rainbow, after, or during a light summer rain. The strutting peacock knows the value of color, and so makes the most of his gorgeous plumage before his lady friends! Color does something spiritually to us all. With what emotion we view a great painting with its imperishable colorings.

I have never read a description of the Grand Canyon of Arizona that did it justice. The coloring is something that remains hidden within your heart as you look upon it. Like the blooming of the wonderful magnolia gardens at Charleston, South Carolina, there is something "unearthly" about them both.

Color has a greater influence upon all of us than we suspect. It is felt at once upon entering a beautiful garden, home, or public building. There are colors that thrill and dance, like invisible figures, and there are those that warm us the moment that we come in contact with them. There are even those that are cold and which chill us.

The color of the sky, of the sea in heavy action, and the silent beauty of reflected stars, dancing upon a body of water at midnight, each is an essay in itself, to be cherished and remembered. How silent, and thoughtful, each one of us becomes, when in the midst of a beautiful garden, or when driving through a colorful country, rich in scenic beauty!

Color is always stimulating to the mind. It puts cheer there, and drives out moodiness. And it has stimulated and inspired love in man, beast, and bird, as nothing else.

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "The Bilateral Mind"

How often do we hear it said,
Are addle-pated, deaf and blind.

The motor of the chap ahead
Is on at crossings sure to stall.
The fellow just behind, instead,
Has brakes that do not work at all.

My hearing's good; my vision's clear;
I am a careful driver, too.
'Tis not my foolishness I fear
But what the other chap may do.

Yet bitter speech to me is said,
By drivers coarse and unrefined,
For sometimes I'm the chap ahead,
At other times the man behind.

Burglary: On Sunday night the residence of Mr. James Pierce, on South Baltimore street, was broken into by burglars, during the absence of the family at the Methodist E. church. . . . Gaining access to the store room, they carried off a pocketbook containing about $25 in money and some valuable papers, also a gold watch, a revolver, single-barreled pistol, about a half bushel of browned coffee, some knives, tobacco, etc. It was a daring burglary, committed at an early hour, on a moonlight night, on one of our main streets.

On Monday morning Detective Rouzer set to work and succeeded in tracing the burglary to Daniel Devan and Carson Devan (colored), living in a house at the junction of the Emmitsburg and Taneytown roads, who were arrested and committed to jail, a portion of the stolen goods being found in their possession. . . . Mr. Rouzer was assisted by Mr. George W. Myers.

Both the Devans, we understand, have been in the penitentiary, Dan's term having expired only three weeks ago. They both have a fair prospect of going back to Philadelphia.

Harrisburg, Feb. 13 (AP)—More than 1,000,000 ex-GIs of World War II already have applied for their share of the Pennsylvania veterans' bonus. MOST MINERS IGNORE LEWIS ORDER TO WORK

Pittsburgh, Feb. 13 (AP)—Striking coal miners across the nation ignored John L. Lewis' go-to-work order today, vowing they'll stay out until they get a contract.

Reports indicated practically all the more than 370,000 strikers are continuing their walkout. They are defying both the United Mine Workers and the government.

Western Pennsylvania and Ohio mines said none of last week's idle soft coal diggers are on the job. Official relay of the Lewis work order may hold up a work-or-not-to-work decision in some areas. A UMW official in Kentucky said he had received no official word and wouldn't order his men back until he did. Many telegraph offices in small mining towns are closed Sundays.

The government indicated it will not seek contempt of court citations if all the diggers fail to report immediately. An official explained this is because of the time required to get the back-to-work orders to the fields.

Hard Coal Miners Working
An indication of sentiment came as overnight crews failed to report at six mines in West Virginia and two in Pennsylvania. The mines employ 6,190 diggers.

While the soft coal strike continued, some 80,000 anthracite (hard coal) miners continued to work in eastern Pennsylvania under the three-day work week imposed by Lewis on the industry at large. And about 30,000 miners covered by new contracts secured by Lewis with minor soft coal operators also were ready to dig.

Three anthracite miners got time and one-half pay, though, for foregoing the traditional Lewis anniversary holiday. The UMW chief quietly observed his 70th birthday yesterday but it is a holiday today under the old anthracite contract.

Some Mark Birthday
The soft coal diggers don't get the holiday under their contract. Last year, however, they observed it by simply staying at home.

And a UMW spokesman for the 6,000 diggers in Oklahoma and Arkansas said his men wouldn't work today because of a double celebration—the birthdays of Lewis and Abraham Lincoln. He wouldn't comment on what might happen tomorrow.

The government's double-barreled legal action during the week-end didn't have much effect on the striking miners. Neither did Lewis' demand that they return to work forthwith. In rapid-fire order there were these developments:

Rapid Developments
1. President Truman's fact-finding board told him it was "imperative" to protect the national health and safety by getting coal production resumed.

2. Mr. Truman asked for an injunction ordering the diggers back to work.

3. Federal District Judge Richmond B. Keech issued a 10-day temporary order for Lewis and his miners to end their strike. He also set a hearing for February 20 to determine whether the directive should be continued for the full 80 days provided by the Taft-Hartley act.

4. Keech also signed an order directing Lewis and his union to drop four major demands in future negotiations for a new contract. This order was requested by major coal operators and secured by Robert N. Denham, chief counsel for the National Labor Relations Board.

Judge Keech also asked Lewis to resume bargaining in good faith. Lewis telegraphed major operators he would meet with them Wednesday.

Miss Townsend told the group that "I have been described as planning to become a lady preacher, but that is not right. I hope to be able to do young people's work or missionary work on a full time basis, but I am not fitted to be a preacher."

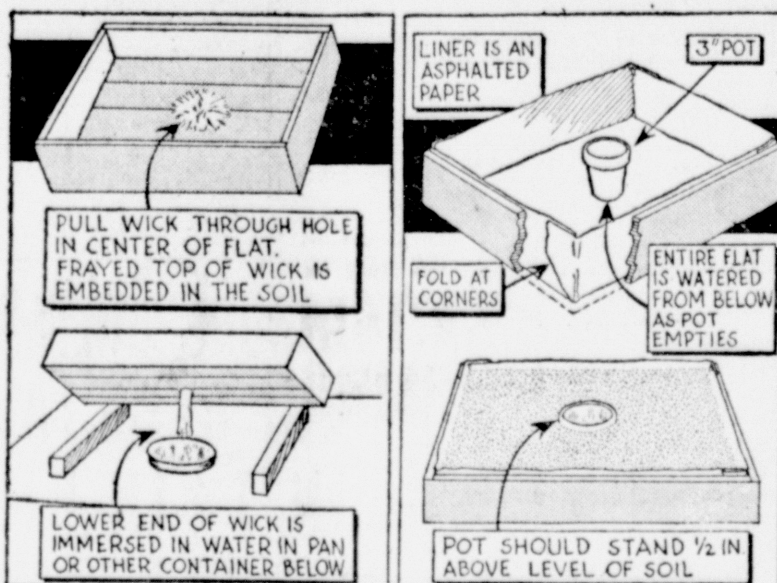

She became a movie actress when she found that her finances would not permit her to remain in college at Los Angeles, she said. "At that time I was trying to find out what to do with my life," she said. "Shortly after I was signed to a movie contract a young man took me to church to attend a young people's meeting. I was not too impressed at first. Then I dropped in again at a meeting and they told me they had made reservations for me to attend Forrest Home, a church-sponsored camp in California."

Attends Services
"When I got there they did not talk about church or religion, but about Jesus and it was the first time that I had ever heard explained our purpose in life. I have come to believe that Christ wants us to do everything through Him, that we should pray constantly to Him about everything, even about parking spaces and what to eat and everything. That is the only way to find happiness."

Sunday morning she attended the regular services at the Presbyterian church where she was seated in the Lincoln pew. Sunday night following the service at the Presbyterian church she was guest at a reception held at the Albert J. Lentz American Legion home.

Automatic Watering Keeps Seed Box Soil Just Right

Most failures of flower and vegetable seeds to grow are probably due to either a lack or an excess of moisture. This is true not only indoors but in the outdoor garden as well. Since watering indoors depends upon a human agency, failures here are more frequent, and have been seriously studied by the scientists.

If the soil gets too dry, the tiny seedlings with their shallow roots may perish in an hour. If kept too wet, fungi may develop, resulting in the fatal disease called "damping-off." To keep the moisture "just right" was formerly a matter of experienced judgment, and required a constant watch on the seed flat, difficult for the amateur.

But science has found two methods which may be followed both before the old fashioned way of spraying on water from above, whenever in the judgment of the gardener watering was required. These methods are illustrated. On the left is the wick method; on the right, sub-irrigation.

Many believe the best method of watering seed flats in the home is the wick method. This consists of using a burlap wick or one of glass, inserting one wick in the center of the flat spreading it over about three inches in diameter on the bottom of the flat inside and letting the wick hang in the water. The water then moves up to the soil by capillarity and keeps the flat at a constant uniform moisture content.

In the subirrigation system a watertight liner is used to hold water until it rises through the soil above.

Both the wick and the flat-insert method of watering plants are satisfactory out-of-doors, both are superior to the ordinary surface-watering method since they do not splash the seeds around and spread disease producing organisms. There is very little difference in the ease of using either of these methods.

If a pan sufficiently large is used beneath the flat, in using the wick method, sufficient water for several days may be provided, and it will rise only as fast as needed, enabling plants to be left unattended for a day or two, when necessary. With either method there is no danger of tiny seedlings being washed out of the soil when water is applied.

NOTES ON GROWING RASPBERRIES

For immediate table use, canning, and storage by quick-freeze methods, raspberries are excelled by few other fruits. Because of these reasons they are in wide demand among urban consumers and may be quickly marketed in cities, towns, and villages or at roadside stands. In fact, numerous surveys shows that raspberries offer one of the outstanding revenue-producing opportunities among all salable crops in this area.

Not among the least of merits cited in favor of this fruit is its per unit cost of production. Properly started on well drained loams and cared for adequately to prevent diseases by keeping the plants vigorous, raspberry plantations continue to bear many years without renewal. With maintenance labors considered, these facts add up to an exceptionally low unit cost over a period of productivity.

Planting should be done in March, preferably as soon as soils can be properly made ready. This means that plants should be ordered from a reliable nursery at once for March 1 delivery. If planting cannot be done as soon as plants arrive, they should be carefully heeled in where the soil is well drained and the site is sheltered from prevailing winds. In other words, roots should not be allowed to dry out before or during planting operations.

Where growers intend to start a commercial plantation they should choose a lower land where there is surrounding lower land into which cold air will drain naturally over winter. Such a location will greatly minimize spring losses. Eastern and north-eastern slopes are often preferred where winter winds come from the west. Northern slopes, while they produce slightly later crops, reduce the dangers of spring frosts hitting extra early blooms.

Too much emphasis can seldom be placed on the wisdom of incorporating plenty of organic matter deeply in soils for this and other bramble fruits. Vigor of plants and subsequent productivity depend largely on depth of fertility and the soil's moisture-holding powers to prevent droughts taking a toll when berries near maturity. The liberality of organic matter that holds moisture through the summer also insures a lower water level in winter.

Home gardeners may utilize rich fence rows for growing a few bushes of raspberries. In this as well as in commercial growing operations it is important to understand that commercial fertilizers will not correct soil defects or render a medium fertile soil suitable in this or any other manner. Fertilizers for raspberries, as for other plants, serve most profitably where the soil is already fertile, deeply mellow, and well drained. To consider com-

MANY JOBS FOR LATE WINTER

February is a bad month for boxwood and rhododendrons because of the frequent freezing and thawing. Protect your plants from the sun with a screen of burlap fastened to stakes.

Inspect fruit trees, shade trees and ornamentals for signs of scale insects. It is easier to control these pests when the plants are dormant. Wash soot and dust from evergreens on warm, sunny days.

Check winter coverings and anchor any that have been loosened by the wind.

Soil preparation for sowing seeds indoors should be done now. Clean and repair seed pans, boxes and flats.

Put sash on coldframes which have not been in use so the ground will warm up and be dry enough when needed.

Inspect house plants for mealy bugs, which are apt to keep re-appearing during the winter. To eliminate them, pick off each bug with a cotton-tipped toothpick dipped in alcohol. Follow with a vigorous spray of water.

A few stems of forsythia brought indoors will flower soon if they are put in water, sprayed every other day and kept in the sun.

Order seeds from the new catalogues for your newly planned garden.

Check your garden tools, lawn mowers and equipment and put them in good working order.

Take advantage of mild weather to prune grape vines.

To repair a thin lawn, the sooner the seed is sown the better the chances for success. It is not necessary to wait until frost is out of the ground. A light cover of snow is an advantage, since it shows clearly where the seeds fall and that insures even distribution. They will find their way to the surface and become embedded in it in time to benefit from the cool weather of late winter and early spring, which helps them germinate.

ally the first serious plant disease the gardener meets in the new growing season, methods of preventing soil-borne diseases in general is a timely subject.

Where disease organisms, such as cabbage yellows, prevail in growing soils, long rotations are, of course, the only practical means of avoiding the trouble. Soil treatment or sterilization on such large scales is out of the question. In fact, careful rotations to permit at least three years to elapse before the same crop is grown again in a certain soil is a wise and profitable practice for home gardeners and commercial growers alike.

Soil sterilization is recommended mainly to prevent transmission of soil-borne dangers in soil used in seed flats, coldframes, hotbeds, plant pots and bands, and similar roles. It is an inexpensive and simple process which every gardener should practice. Results cannot be measured solely by disease prevented. Experience proves conclusively that plants started in sterilized soil make faster and sturdier growth, regardless of the disease factor.

Commercial growers recognize three main methods of sterilizing soils, methods which home gardeners may easily adopt, particularly two which are explained in detail below.

First of these is the steam method, od, which consists of introducing "live" steam through a hose and portable pipe into loose heaps of bed soil so all parts of the soil are thoroughly heated by the steam. This method is more feasible where large quantities of soil are to be treated; hence it is employed mainly by commercial gardeners who can afford the necessary equipment.

The next is the hot-water method. As the name indicates, boiling water is applied to loose soil so all potential organisms are destroyed. Two factors should be stressed in using this method—have the water actually boiling at the time it is applied, and soak the soil liberally, at least 3 gallons of water to each cubic foot of loose soil. Where only a small quantity of soil is sterilized it may be placed in a loosely constructed box and the boiling water poured through the soil. Of course, soil must be dried properly before it is used.

The third method makes use of formaldehyde. One quart (two pounds) of 40 percent formaldehyde is mixed on 25 gallons of water, and this solution applied at the rate of 1½ gallons to each square foot of bed soil that has been loosened to a depth of 10 inches. Or if the soil is loose outside the bed, it should be spread to a depth of 6 inches and one gallon of the solution applied to each square foot of soil surface. In either case the soil should be covered snugly at once with oilcloth or canvas to hold the fumes intact for 48 hours, after which the soil should be stirred frequently to aerate it for 10 days to two weeks before sowing seed or setting plants in it.

Store seeds in a cool place if they reach you too early. They keep better in a warm room.

Chapter 27

Vaise was already in his own saddle. For two white men to ride in on such a war party of hundreds, worked up and thirsty for blood as they were, looked like the height of folly. But it was the very recklessness of the scheme which gave them a possible chance of winning.

They could confront Zachary to his face with his treachery, tell the father of the two slain Indians how Zachary had doublecrossed them and sent them to their death. If they failed, they would die—and unpleasantly. Neither Vaise nor de Polo had any doubts as to that.

"Maybe it's a hundred to one chance, which are long odds," de Polo remarked. "But if we win, it saves a hundred other lives at the risk of one or two—and what better odds can a man ask? Well, the faster we move now, the better, eh?"

They rode together, keeping their horses to a walk, eyes straight ahead, heading for the cluster of chieftains. Already the tempo of the dance was beginning to slow; it was nearly ready to break up. The attention of most of the leaders, like that of Zachary himself, was on the proudly defiant figure of Saralee.

There were a few excited cries and a sound or so of anger at their appearance, but they were counting on the surprise of their entrance, the audacity of the thing, to take them through. And though a ring of warriors closed in behind them, no attempt was made to stop them.

So far it was good enough. But there was always a difference between putting your head into the lion's mouth and pulling it out again. No one admired courage more than an Indian, and this was an exhibition of raw nerve. But at such a time, as this, no one was more unpredictable than an Indian, and the Indians had already made up their minds to war. On the scales as well as Zachary, there to influence them all he could.

Vaise saw the look which came into Saralee's face as she saw him, and for a moment he could see nothing else, nor think of what might be yet to come. That look was reward enough for the risk, whatever the outcome might be. It swept away the years that were gone, with all their pain and misunderstanding.

There was sheer amazement on Zachary's face, red in the reflected glow of the firelight. The anger that had been on it changed, even as other faces were changing under an onslaught of mingled emotions.

The crimson cast of the blazing bonfires were fading a little as dawn struggled to lift the pall, but it was a gray and unchancy morning. The drizzle had temporarily subsided, but that did not lessen the savage wildness of the encampment. Somewhere a dog yapped, loud amid the silence that had fallen, for even the war drums had halted. The dog was promptly kicked to silence again by a half-grown boy, tense with the strain.

Both men lifted their hands in friendly salute as they pulled up. The squaws, hesitant, started to jerk Saralee away, but when she braced herself and stood rock-like, they desisted and contented themselves with keeping guard on either side of her.

Zachary, his face composed again, was watching them narrowly, quick to grasp what this meant. The Indians were alert, not knowing quite what to expect. A few braves at the edge of darkness scurried about, on the lookout to see if anyone else had followed them.

They did not make the mistake of dismounting. Lazing in the saddles, as though this sort of thing were a casual and everyday occurrence, gave them a certain advantage now.

"How!" de Polo greeted them, hand raised in the gesture of friendship. And White Bear, after a moment, returned the greeting with a noncommittal grunt, hand at his side. But there was animosity deep in his hooded eyes. The next moment it was replaced by surprise, which was mirrored on the faces of most of the Indians, as de Polo spoke in their native tongue with an easy fluency.

"We have come here," he said without preamble, "to tell you the truth about the slaying of your sons, White Bear. To point out the one who speaks with a fabled tongue, with mischief in his heart—the one who is the real slayer of Lone Buffalo and Far Runner. I speak of Zachary, whose skin is now neither white nor red, but whose heart is black."

None of this was according to custom nor the ancient ceremonies. It was blunt speech. But the conditions were unusual ones, and the chiefs were ready enough to recognize that. However, by this time Zachary had regained his composure and was ready with a swift denial.

"He lies," he growled. "He comes here to cause more trouble. Both of them do."

"We will let you, who are most concerned, be the judge of that, White Bear," de Polo retorted. "If our proof does not satisfy you that it was he who really killed your sons, then we are here, in your power. Would we come at such a time unless we were sure?"

That was convincing, and Vaise, though he could understand only a few words, hardly enough to get the drift of what was being said, could see that de Polo had impressed them. Zachary saw it, too. "We have already decided on war," he reminded them quickly. "Are we going to listen to trouble-makers now, at this late hour?"

FAMINE TAKES HAND IN CHINA AFFAIRS AGAIN

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

The dread hand of famine again has spun the wheel of fortune in China and until it stops no man—either Nationalist or Communist—can say what fate has in store for that war-torn country.

Communist-occupied East China, north of the mighty Yangtze river, is being swept by the scourge of hunger. At least 16,000,000 people are reported by the Communist News Agency to be feeling the pinch, and some 2,700,000 are said to be facing starvation.

Spring, which isn't so far away, is expected to bring worsening conditions in this area. Should the famine develop into a major disaster, as so often has happened in the past, it could have far-reaching effects on the status of the communist offensive in the Far East, for China is essential to Red success.

After Rice Crops
Small wonder that the Chinese Communists, who now dominate most of China, are straining every nerve to reach the rice crops of Burma, Indo-China and other food centers of the Far East.

Rice kernels are more potent than bullets these days.

China has been afflicted with innumerable disastrous famines through the centuries. People have died in untold millions. Now with her population of 500,000,000—more than a fifth of all the people in the world—there are hosts of folk who, quite apart from famine, always are hungry. There just isn't enough food for all, and that's a condition which exists in most parts of the Far East.

China's position now is particularly bad because for more than thirty-eight years the republic has known little peace. The ravages of war have left a terrible mark on the life of the country. And agriculture has been particularly hard hit. Armies have surged back and forth across the tilled fields, killing what crops the locusts hadn't got. And of course in many cases armies have appropriated the grain of farming communities, leaving the people to suffer.

So China now is very weak as this new plague of hunger descends on her. Famine means that people peel bark from elm and willow and acacia trees and eat it. They mix bitter roots of weeds with dried sweet potato vine, millet husks and peanut shells and eat them.

The gaunt-eyed children develop bloated bellies. Their elders grow more and more emaciated. And finally one by one they give up the fight and just lie down to die, either from actual starvation or allied diseases like dysentery.

It is characteristic of many Oriental peoples that they blame the government when disaster overtakes them, even though it be an act of nature. The Chinese are that way, and the advent of famine, one top of all their other troubles, could easily cause an adverse reaction to the Red regime.

Appropos of this it is interesting to note that the Chinese New Year begins on February 17. That ordinarily is a time of great celebration—a time for settling accounts—a time of looking into the future. If conditions aren't good during this period, which lasts about a fortnight, then that is a bad omen for the ensuing year.

Meantime the Nationalists, with headquarters on the island of Formosa, are increasing their war from the air against Communist-held cities and Red shipping. Peiping and nine other great Chinese cities have been warned by the Nationalists to expect bombing in the immediate future.

So China's bloody civil strife continues with the Communists occupying most of that sprawling country, but with the future far from clear.

SELECT MAY QUEEN
Chambersburg, Pa., Feb. 13 (AP)—Miss Marilyn Malkeme, Wilkes-Barre, will be the May Queen at the 49th annual Wilson college May Day celebration May 6. College officials announced Saturday she was the winner from among 13 other seniors who were nominated for the role on the basis of beauty and poise.

Frankfurt, Germany, Feb. 13 (AP)—Dr. Hans Schlange-Schoeninger, who claims he once plotted to bomb Adolf Hitler, has been nominated as Germany's first postwar envoy to the United States, American officials disclosed today.

The greying, 63-year-old agricultural expert was proposed by the West German government, the officials said. The government was invited by the Allies last week to send envoys immediately to Washington, Paris and London.

200 Prize Cats On Display At Pittsburgh
Pittsburgh, Feb. 11 (AP)—More than 200 prize cats were on display at the All-American cat show but a Canadian cat took the limelight simply because he's a heavyweight.

Eddythe Wiles, 25-year-old singer from Toronto, brought Pinky to the show in the hope that he might prove to be the heaviest cat in the U. S. She says he's already captured that title in Canada.

Pinky weighs in at 23 pounds. He's five years old and "the nicest companion I've ever known," says Eddythe. Just for the book, Pinky is a pure-bred red and white domestic short-hair. That means simply that he's an ordinary housecat.

If you're interested in cats, the cat-show people will tell you the felines are "the nicest pets, most intelligent and understanding thing you can have around the house."

And how many cats are there in America? About 9,000,000 says a spokesman for the exhibition. And he adds the number is increasing every day.

Donora, Pa., Feb. 13 (AP)—The American Steel and Wire company says it is doing everything in its power—"short of closing plants and moving away"—to help prevent another Donora smog tragedy.

Harvey B. Jordan, president of the U. S. Steel Corp., subsidiary, told the Donora Chamber of Commerce last night his firm has hired a weather forecasting agency to aid the fight against a fatal smog.

Takes Overall Look At Foreign Policy
Washington, Feb. 13 (AP)—The Truman administration was reported today to be taking a new, overall look at American foreign policy to determine just where the United States now stands in the conflict with Russia.

The study is being made by the National Security Council. This agency embraces the State department, the Defense department and other government agencies.

Responsible officials said that the aim of the present review, which is the latest in a series of such studies to keep President Truman and the cabinet currently informed of "where we stand," is not expected to produce any new turn in the direction of major foreign policy.

It may, however, lead to some answers of questions raised by the long argument over the projected hydrogen bomb, its possible uses and its impact on world affairs.

Northern Idaho mines are among the major sources in the United States of lead, zinc and silver.

Denies Foundation Is 'Front' Organization
Valley Forge, Pa., Feb. 13 (AP)—Freedoms Foundation officials have taken exception to a union's charge that the foundation is "a front organization for American reactionaries."

"The foundation is non-political, non-commercial, non-sectarian and non-profit," declared President Don Belding and Executive Vice President Kenneth D. Wells in a statement yesterday.

The statement was issued in answer to a charge made by Paul L. Phillips, president of the AFL-International Brotherhood of Paper Makers in announcing the union was returning $600 and a gold medal to the foundation.

The union's house organ, "The Paper Maker," was awarded third place last fall in the foundation's "best union publication class."

Scouts In Church

"A Scout's Treasure Hunt" was the theme of the sermon by the Rev. Kenneth D. James, pastor of St. John's Lutheran church on Sunday morning, when Littlestown Boy Scout Troop No. 84 and Cub Pack No. 84 and their leaders attended the service in a body as part of the 40th anniversary observance of Boy Scouts. The altar flowers in Redeemer's Reformed church on Sunday morning were in memory of Edward F. Spangler and were placed there by the family. There were also baskets of flowers in the chancel in memory of Edwin H. Crouse, a member of the congregation, who died last Tuesday. The pastor, the Rev. Frank E. Reynolds, announced that there will be two rehearsals this week for the minstrel which the young men's class will present in the social hall on Shrove Tuesday evening. On Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, there will be a rehearsal of the entire group, and Thursday at 8:30 p. m., there will be a rehearsal of the end-men.
